

CASE STUDY

When Experience Matters

Timely Response, Excellent Service Equal Solution for Client

The Challenge:

When a competitor wireline provider could not provide standard cement bond log and vertical perforating services of a well, a southeastern Colorado client urgently needed to find a new wireline services provider.

Due to efforts our sales team, Allied-Horizontal was called at the last minute and were awarded the work, which comprised running a standard RCBL, then returning the next day to perforate an undetermined zone of interest.

Our Response:

Providing services from nearby Brighton, Colorado, Allied-Horizontal quickly arrived on location to safely and efficiently perform a standard RCBL from TD at 7,950 ft. to surface in this field where the wells require acid stimulation but not fracturing.

The Allied-Horizontal sales team hand-delivered colored copies of the log to the client's corporate office, putting everyone in the field and in the Denver office on the same page regarding the 40-foot zone to be perforated, which Allied-Horizontal did in two trips, using two 20 foot guns.

The Result:

Allied-Horizontal were able to deploy and arrive on location quickly and performed an efficient and safe RCBL and perforating operation, keeping the client informed and up to date with timely communication.

Because Allied-Horizontal was able to respond when called upon, the client did not have to suffer any lost time looking for a wireline company; instead, timely and efficient service led to Allied-Horizontal being awarded the next well before leaving the location of the first well.

